EL DORADO DREDGE COMPANY EMPLOYES 23 WORKERS ON GEORGETOWN DIVIDE

Twenty-three men are employed in the prospecting and dragline dredging operations being carried on by the El Dorado Dredging Co. in the Georgetown Divide area, says a Sacramento paper.

The boat is working on Travis Creek near Georgetown, and is now handling 2,000 yards a day. Ray Zanini, superintendent, said approximately 400,000 yards are being worked on the fifty acre property owned by Allen and Lester Hughes of Georgetown.

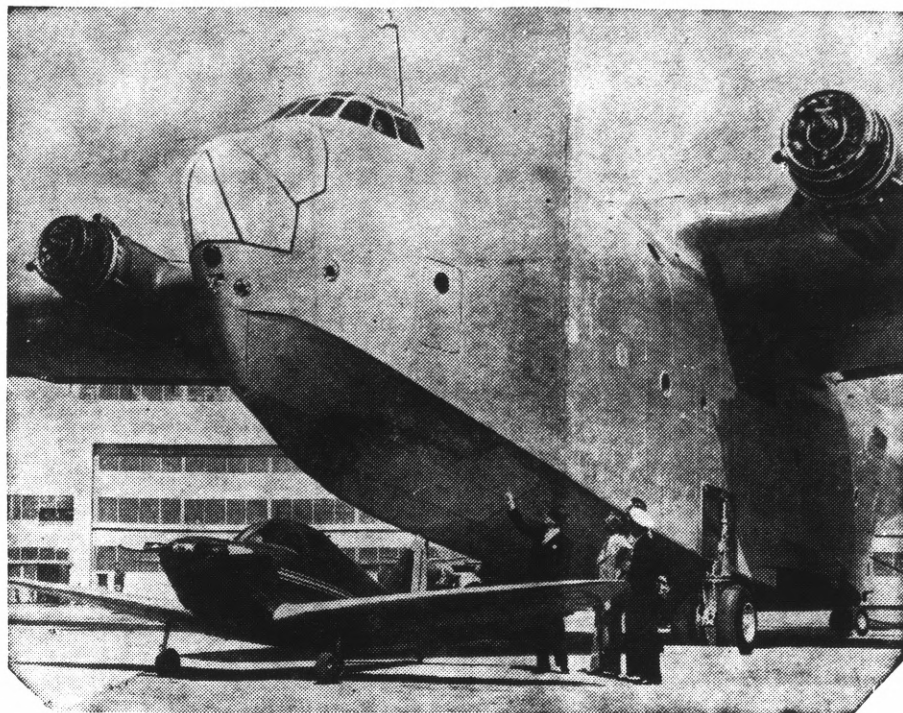

Water is used from Travis Creek to float the boat. The brush and trees are cleared off with a caterpillar and the gold bearing material is mined by a gas shovel. This is delivered to a grizzly which discards the larger material. The flow is then through a trommel and over riffles which save the metal. The stacker belt stacks the waste back of the boat.

Cardinal Lauri Passes After Operation

VATICAN CITY, (UP)—Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri, 77, Camerleengo of the College of Cardinals, who would have become acting pope in event of the pontiff's death, died today.

An operation was performed on Monday but his condition grew steadily worse. He was a personal friend and adviser of Pius XII, whose professor he had been years ago.

Navy's New Sky Giant Takes an Airing

Rolled from her hangar for the first time, the Martin XPB-2-M-1 bomber, built for the U. S. Navy, is shown at the Glenn L. Martin plant in Baltimore. The flying battleship has a 200-foot wingspread. The small ship in the foreground is a Culver Cadet and gives some idea of the new navy fighter's tremendous size. Details of armament and performance are a secret, but the ship will soon be put through exhaustive tests.

POLICE RADIO STATION ASKED OF BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Discussion On Matter Continued Until Nov. 4; Assessor Names Field Deputy To Assist In Work Of Office On Temporary Basis

There were two high-lights of the October meeting of the Board of Supervisors, concluded on Tuesday of this week.

The Board continued until November 4 for further discussion a proposal put by Sheriff George M. Smith and Highway Patrol Captain E. A. Brewster that the county establish a police radio station.

Supervisors reported that preliminary discussion of the matter indicated that such a station would require an initial outlay of between $3,800 and $5,000.

The second item of special interest was the announcement that Dwight Douglas has been employed by County Assessor E. L. Scott as a field deputy.

Mr. Douglas had been working during the month of September at the direction of the Board of Supervisors and submitted a report to the Board on the results of his work.

Selective Service Tests Show Need For Attention To Health

SACRAMENTO—Brig. Gen. J. O. Donovan, state director of selective service, today made public a report by Colonel Leonard G. Rowntree, chief of the medical Division of the Selective Service System, in which it is shown that preliminary reports of men examined for possible selective service training indicate that approximately 50 per cent only are physically and mentally qualified for general military training under the current standards which are declared to be higher than at any time in the history of the United States.

Principal cause for rejection by local boards and army induction stations is defective teeth, Colonel Rowntree reports, which, he adds, accounts for 20.9 per cent of rejections. Other major disqualification

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS WILL GO ON RESERVE STATUS AT COMPLETION OF WORK TERM, SUBJECT TO FUTURE CALL

SACRAMENTO, (UP)—Brig. Gen. J. O. Donovan, state director of selective service, said today conscientious objectors to military training who are assigned to work under civilian direction will be placed in reserve status upon completion of their period of work.

Such reservists will be subject to recall in the same manner as military selectees are liable for duty as reservists after their training period.

Donovan explained an amendment to the selective service regulations relating to liability of conscientious objectors provides:

"Each such assignee (to work in camps) after completion of his period of work, shall be transferred to a reserve until he attains the age of 45, or until the expiration of 10 years after such transfer, or until he is discharged from such reserve, whichever occurs first, and shall, during such period, be deemed to be a member of such reserve and shall be subject to such additional participation in work of national importance under civilian direction as may now or hereafter be prescribed by law."

Donovan said any conscientious

SAVAGE BATTLE ON RED FRONT

Soviets Claim German "Break Through" Repulsed; 32 More Are Executed

LONDON, (UP)—Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin replied to critics of the government's use of manpower today with a hint of the danger of revolution if extreme measures are adopted for labor.

"The Germans tried leveling the wages and ordering over-time," Bevin told the House of Commons. "This led to revolt even in Germany."

The labor minister did not carry his comment further but his remarks were regarded in parliamentary circles as reflecting fears of repercussions if unwise or extreme measures are adopted in the program to throw Britain's full strength into the war effort.

More Executions
BERLIN, (UP)—An official news agency dispatch from Belgrade reported today that 30 persons at the town of Tschurpurija and two at Jagodina had been executed on the charges of "membership in communist gangs."

By UNITED PRESS
Panzer assault forces leading Adolf Hitler's all-out offensive had broken through the central front today and claimed the encirclement and "certain destruction" of elite Red armies defending Moscow.

The Russians, admitting breakthrough operations, reported they were fighting back in savage battles, that the Germans had been repulsed at many points and that Hitler already had been forced to throw reserves into the offensive because of tremendous loss of men and material.

The Nazi high command said that "several" Russian armies had been encircled in this sector due west of Moscow on the Smolensk railroad. This indicated a gain of 70 or 75 miles in the six-day offensive. The Berlin press went farther, apparently on official instructions, and said that the greater part of the best armies of Marshal Semyon Timoshenko had been trapped and faced swift annihilation.

If these Berlin press reports are confirmed the position of the Red army would become desperate and the abandonment of Moscow would seem certain. It was obvious, however, that the Russians still were fighting furiously as an organized army and that the encirclement was either comparatively weak or not yet complete.

The Russian news agency said that heavy fighting had broken out between Yugoslav guerrillas and German-Italian forces in Yugoslavia, where several hundred German officers and men were captured.

The Russians also claimed that guerrilla operations were spreading in Norway and that the Oslo-Eidsvoll railroad line had been cut. The Germans were said to have seized persons living along the line and threatened to execute them if sabotage continued.

ARMING MERCHANT SHIPS WILL BE ASKED OF CONGRESS ON THURSDAY

The President Will Say, Leaders Report, That Revision Of Neutrality Act Is Urgently Needed; House May Act First

WASHINGTON — (UP)—President Roosevelt tomorrow will ask congress to revise the whole neutrality law and an effort will be made to have the house pass the first part of the revision — to permit arming of U. S. Merchant ships—by the middle of next week.

This was decided upon today at a second conference between the President and leaders for both parties in congress.

COUGARS PLAY NEVADA CITY

Game Saturday At Bennett Park Another Practice Tilt In Grid Schedule

Someone "got off on the wrong foot" and was going to send the Cougars to San Andreas to play Friday night, which is an idea, all right, but not in keeping with the schedule planned by Coach L. A. Brown.

The Cougars are going to San Andreas for a night game on October 17th, but this week they are playing at Marcus P. Bennett, Jr., Memorial Park.

Saturday afternoon, October 11, Nevada City invades the Cougar lair. It is the third game on the schedule for the Cougars and their second non-league game in a row. The Cougars opened the season with a win against Bret Harte in a league game and in their second game, a practice tilt at Auburn last Friday night, lost 18 to 7.

DIAMOND SPRINGS PUPILS ENJOY ASSEMBLY AND MOTION PICTURES

A recent assembly gave the pupils and some of the parents of pupils of the Diamond Springs school an opportunity to see a group of especially interesting motion pictures.

Paul D. Hayward, Jr., of the Soil Conservation Service, showed the film "The Heritage We Guard," illustrating the importance of erosion control and other soil conserving practices.

"Behind the Shadows" and "Goodbye, Mr. Germ" were two other films, shown with the co-operation of the California Tuberculosis Association and County School Nurse Helen Byrnes, through whose courtesy Miss Beatrice Woodward, of the state association, attended and spoke briefly.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Paterson and family left during the weekend for New York City, where Mr. Paterson will be stationed for the winter in connection with his work with the Oregon-Washington-California Pear Bureau.

WEATHER
Fair tonight, Thursday; little change in temperature; freezing at night above 6000 feet.

Mr. Roosevelt will state to congress, leaders reported, that revision of the law to permit arming of U. S. merchant ships and to permit them to go into "combat zones" from which they are now barred is urgently necessary. Principal effect of the present combat zone provisions are to prevent American flag ships from going to Halifax and to the British Isles.

Senate Democratic leader Alben W. Barkley, spokesman for the congressional group, said bills incorporating the President's program will be introduced in both houses immediately after receipt of the message. The administration plan, he said, is for the house to act first.

This was Mr. Roosevelt's second conference in 24 hours with the Congressional leaders on the momentous decision to revise the neutrality act.

Leaders of both parties from the senate and house attended today's meeting, whereas most of the conferees yesterday were senators. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and Lend-Lease Supervisor Harry L. Hopkins also participated in the conference in the President's study.

"The President will send a message to congress tomorrow," Barkley said. "The message must speak for itself. The house will act first on whatever legislation is taken up."

Barkley was pressed as to whether Mr. Roosevelt would ask action first on the section which prohibits arming of merchant vessels, and propose later elimination of section 2 which specifies proclamation of combat zones from which American flag shipping is excluded.

He replied that arming of the ships "might be the most urgent."

"The President could hardly ask for anything less," a reporter suggested.

Barkley nodded affirmation. "Do you see any possibility of a senate filibuster?" Barkley was asked.

"I don't like to discuss the possibility of a filibuster even before the bill is introduced," Barkley said after several moments' deliberation which appeared to indicate that the administration has considered this possibility.

ACHILLES' HEEL?

Love in Disguise

by MARY KEAS

Peggy O'Toole, whose parents died after migrating from Dublin to New York, has grown up under the wing of an elderly widow, Mrs. Burke, whose two small grandchildren, Mickey and Rosemary, also live with her. Peggy becomes governess to Janice Meredith, grandchild of Peter Meredith. She learns that Mr. Meredith has an unmarried son, George, who quarreled with his father and left home several months ago. Meanwhile, she has become engaged to a young taxi-driver, Jimmie Butler. Late one night, she is called to the Meredith home when Janice has a fit of hysterics. She discovers that the prodigal son returned home that day, but is now out late at a party. The family physician, driving her home, stops to pick up George. He proves to be Jimmie, is very drunk, and behaves like a cad. Peggy takes his ring from her finger, and leaps from the doctor's car to go home alone. On her way, she is struck by a hit-and-run driver. The next morning, Jimmie reads of the accident in the paper and dashes to the hospital.

CHAPTER XVII

IN AN anteroom of the hospital, a silent little group waited anxiously. They all knew that, upstairs, Peggy lay on an operating table.

In one corner of the room Grandma Burke sat rigidly, moving her lips in prayer. Mickey, continually swallowing a lump in his throat and fighting back tears, stood beside her, his hand in hers.

In another corner, sat young Mrs. Meredith, white-faced, staring into space. Her father-in-law paced the floor.

Jimmie, who had arrived only a little while before, stood at a window, gazing unseeing at the lawn below. His hands were clenched until the knuckles gleamed white.

And there were two others present, an elderly couple — Mr. and Mrs. Henry Greer.

Their lawyer, Mr. Clayton had been among those who had seen the picture in the paper—that picture with the heading, DO YOU KNOW THIS GUY? He had recognized her. Had he phoned his clients at once. So, now they were here—Peggy's grandparents, who had never seen her.

But though they had never seen her, their anxiety was as great as that of the others in the room—with the added poignancy of bitter remorse. Had they found their lost daughter's child only to lose her? After all these years. Their suffering was reflected in their drawn faces. But like the others, they could only wait—and hope.

A clock on the wall slowly ticked on.

AT LAST, the surgeon appeared. He came into the room quietly, still wearing his white gown and cap.

Everyone looked at him without speaking. "The operation—went as well as could be expected," he announced. His tired eyes traveled over all their faces. "We have done our best," he went on, "but it will be several days before we can say whether she will pull through. And if she lives—" He paused.

"Yes, doctor?"

"She may never walk again."

The little group stared at one another speechlessly. Grandma Burke gave a little moan. Mickey now frankly gave way to tears.

Jimmie stepped forward. "You— you can't give us any more hope than that, Doctor?" he pleaded.

"I'm sorry," the surgeon answered. "Only a miracle could give her the power to walk again."

Jimmie turned away. "A miracle," he muttered. "There is little use in waiting," the doctor told them all. "You will not be able to see her. The nurse will inform you if there is any change—any need to return."

Slowly, the little group broke up went their different ways.

JIMMIE left the hospital alone. He did not return home. Instead he walked—on and on—aimlessly.

It was not grief alone that tore at him. He was tortured, as well, by self-accusations. With the shock of reading the news in the paper the memory of the events of last night had come back to him. It had all been a blur at first. But now, he remembered—Peggy in the car with the doctor, his own drunken behavior though he couldn't remember just what he had said and done, then, Peggy leaving the car and later, the doctor handing him the ring.

It was right after that, on her way home, that she had been struck down. He was responsible! If he had not behaved as he had she would not have gone home alone.

Worse still, he was haunted by the thought that whatever he had done and said must have hurt her so, that she had not been in full possession of her senses, and thus had stepped blindly in front of the car. She had returned his ring, it was plain he had wounded her deeply.

He groaned, and increased his pace—trying, through physical exertion, to drive away the thoughts that tortured him.

MANY anxious days followed while Peggy hovered on the brink of the chasm between life and the beyond. Unceasingly, the doctors fought to save her but, at first, the struggle seemed to go against them.

Something within the girl herself handicapped their battle. Though unconscious or delirious most of the time she seemed subconsciously to lack the will to live.

And then, at last, came the turn—the first sign of improvement. The delirium passed, consciousness returned and, slowly, bit by bit she rallied.

Finally, there came a day when she was allowed to see her friends for the first time—the Burkes and the Merediths and Anna. One by one, they were shown into her room, for a few minutes each.

Unfortunately, Jimmie was the last to arrive.

"I'm sorry," the nurse told him, "but she can see no one else today."

His face fell. "Not even for a few seconds?"

"Not now—I'm afraid we have already let her see too many people. She is quite worn out, and is sleeping."

"Couldn't I just have a look at her?" Jimmie pleaded. His heart in his eyes. "I won't waken her."

The nurse hesitated. "Well, if you'll be very sure not to disturb her, you may have just a peek," she relented.

Jimmie stood motionless inside the door. Then, he softly tiptoed to the side of the bed, and stood gazing down at the sleeping girl. His heart was torn by the gaunt thinness of her face and the pallor of her cheeks.

Her lips moved slightly, and she seemed to whisper something in her sleep. Had it been "Jimmie"?

The young man's heart contracted. No; it was just his imagination.

He bent over and gently kissed her hand, lying on the counterpane. Then, he turned and quietly left the room.

"THIS BOOK ISN'T WORTH READING ... tear down the Library!"

One bad book doesn't make it a bad library. You wouldn't destroy the library to get rid of a few bad books.

A similar situation holds in the beer industry. The vast majority of beer retailers operate clean, decent law-abiding establishments. Now and then an occasional "black sheep" retailer turns up who violates the law or permits anti-social conditions.

The Beer Industry is now actively working to eliminate such retailers. We want to protect your right to drink good beer and our right to make it.

We also want to protect the economic benefits of beer. Right here in California, beer provides employment for 102,698 persons, supports an annual payroll of $90,386,601 and contributed $2,186,489.99 last year in state taxes.

This state, too, has an important stake in Beer's purchases from more than 100 industries supplying the brewing industry with materials, equipment and services.

You, too, can help the cause of moderation by (1) patronizing only the reputable places where beer is sold, and (2) reporting any law violation you may observe to the duly constituted authorities.
